U.S. Preventive Medicine CEO Presented Today at Stifel, Nicolaus Healthcare Conference

JACKSONVILLE, FL (September 16, 2010)-Christopher T. Fey, Chairman and CEO of U.S. Preventive Medicine, Inc., spoke today to the attendees of the Stifel, Nicolaus Healthcare Conference in Boston.

The three day conference features presentations and updates from senior management of leading health care companies from around the country. It will enable investors and executives to better understand the health care services industry and identify marketplace opportunities. Attendees will have access to over 200 leading public and private companies in biotechnology, diagnostics, healthcare IT & services, life science technology, major and specialty pharmaceuticals, and medical devices.

Fey presented an overview of The Prevention Plan™, the company's comprehensive preventive health benefit that helps individuals, companies and governments reduce health care costs and improve productivity by significantly reducing key health risks.

"We are pleased to introduce our company and The Prevention Plan at this important conference showcasing the latest innovation and trends in the health care services industry," said Fey.
